WHOLESALE BARBIES
RETAIL CIRCUS

BY AND WITH MORGANA MORANDI

CREATION
2022/24

NOTE OF INTENTION:

All of this work starts with the body and with play. From the play of the body and from the body of play.

Playing to break and playing to rebuild, to break again...

Dismantling, reassembling, making, undoing... Isn't that what children do when they play?

I break Barbie, I dismantle and deconstruct my body, to then reconstruct everything in different ways, but without new fixed forms, without any new "how it should be".

No one educates you as a woman, nor as a man, nor in any other definition, to ask yourself what you want, what you think, what you like. No one teaches you to say yes or, above all, to say no.

One question after another, I want to bring my story of play and discovery, against the sacred stereotypes of "how to grow up", "how to play", "how to live", "how to sit"...

I want to recommend to the children who will watch me not to lose what they have, and to the adults to remember not to take themselves too seriously, without forgetting how fun it is to play even as adults, leaving aside their own "mental joints"!

This SHOW:

ROCKS!!

Contemporary circus SOLO for theatres, bedrooms and chapiteau

for all ages and genders

short form: 30 min -
long form 55 min

Once upon a time...

...there was a plastic body.

Maybe two, maybe 10, maybe a hundred... Or maybe a hundred and one!

There were once a lot of little cyborgs that brightened the lives of little girls, allowing them to imagine all the possible worlds, places, and moments that those inanimate creatures could materialize and experience.

→ There's Morgana: a smart girl who wakes up early in the morning waiting for her parents to wake up, doing what all children do (and almost no adult): play!

And there are the Barbies: ← playmates, imagination companions, possible and impossible adventure partners, who in this absurd situation take on all the roles I want them to... They are my friends, my doubles, my audience, my enemies, the spoons for my Nutella, my superpowers, my bullets...

✗ Scenes of war,
transformer skirts, ✗ ✗ giant butts,
pink drills, ✗
✗ dart games with pieces of Barbie... ✗

An invitation to imitate what surrounds us, analyze it,
and then take our own path
and experiment.

Accept external input to create oneself.
Breaking and fixing oneself, always moving forward, in continuous and infinite change.

A game on the body and a body that plays:
breaks and reconstructions,
deconstructions and illusions.

A universe that comes to life,
changes itself, and changes anyone who encounters it, taking and giving something, giving life back to parts of us forgotten or timidly rusted.

An invitation to do whatever we want with ourselves and our bodies!

WHY BARBIES?

I Love Them

I Hate Them

because of their BODIES

because they are GAMES

I am trying to talk about different, non-conforming, strange, crazy, and unwatchable bodies... Through the most "perfect" body there is!

I searched for the BROKEN, RECONSTRUCTED, DECONSTRUCTED body! I found it in my contortion, in the aerial hoop that makes my butt look huge and then deforms the shapes of my body while hanging, altering the perception of those who look at me. I found it in the hula hoop, which is an aerial hoop in pieces. I found it in the body of Barbie, the first "adult" body that many of us had to deal with (besides that of our parents).

A perfect body that, broken or fixed, could not exist in reality!
So is it really perfect?

Glitch...

The game I started to fantasize about was a SEX TOY: a dildo, which is a game for adults (so similar to the legs of these dolls... also born as games for adults!).

So I asked myself and asked people: do we still play? What are the games for adults?

There are those who have a child, those who go to parties, those who have sex, those who have a dog, a cat, a horse, a basketball game... And you?

Do you like Barbies? What do you think if I say Barbie?

Did you play with them? Do you have any specific memories?

If you were a Barbie that finally had a human body, what would you do/say?

* see Lili: Germany in the 1950s, femme fatale of a comic book, gifted in the form of a doll at bachelor parties to remind men of what "they could no longer have". An American mother travels to Germany and meets Lili, after seeing her daughter Barbara repeatedly cut out clothes to dress up figures from magazines, in 1956 Barbie is born, THE FIRST ADULT DOLL AND NOT A BABY DOLL! The rest is history...

I would like to bring all the objects on stage to life: I am alone, but never really lonely!
Anything can happen in a bedroom!

I want to materialize the absurd journey that we embark on as children, and much more, going in a direction of magic and wild imagination.

The Barbies move by themselves,
following me, becoming big, small,
exploding, shooting and who knows what else they will do by themselves in the bedroom. Barbie's car becomes my friend and assistant, moving by itself on stage and bringing me what I need or don't need.

For this reason, I would also like to "bring to life" the audience, making them an active and integral part of this collective delirium, simply by making them aware of the fundamental role they already have in the performative act.

GENDER
PERFORMATIVITY-
Judith Butler

Gender is like "an act (in a theatrical performance), where the script survives the actors who make use of it, but is lifeless until it is staged."

Gender resides in repeated words and actions, which shape and are shaped by the bodies of real human beings, made of flesh and bones.

What is your best quality?

"Fabulousness!"

Your worst defect?

"Being too fabulous!"

What would I never change:

"Being the most fabulous!"

Your secret dream?

"That nobody will ever be as fabulous as me!"

Your worst nightmare?

*"That someone become more fabulous than me...
but that's not possible!"*

Morandi MORGANA

I was born in Bologna on September 27th, 1995, with a twin sister and a childhood spent as avid Barbie players.

I practiced rhythmic gymnastics at a competitive level for 13 years, participating in countless competitions, theater shows, and performances in public squares, events, festivals, and more.

This experience led me to realize that I wanted to work with my body and perform on stage when I grew up.

Alongside my gymnastics training, I attended a Scientific High School in Bologna and later graduated with a degree in Psychology. During my last year of studies, I discovered aerial disciplines and theater.

In 2017, shortly after graduating, I began my training at the Flic Circus School, which ended in 2020, with the aerial hoop as my main discipline. There, I had the opportunity to develop my technical and artistic skills, and to meet numerous directors and choreographers.

After completing the Flic program, I resumed my academic studies by attending a Master's program in Neuro-psychosomatics at the Villaggio Globale in Bagni di Lucca.

I continued to deepen my technical and artistic training, particularly studying clowning with

Antonio Villella, contortion with various teachers, and contemporary dance as part of the Alta Formazione program at the Arearea Company in Udine. Currently,

I have founded the street circus and theater company LE VAMP, and we are touring with our first show,

"Pink Punk!" Meanwhile, I have finally returned to playing with Barbie by becoming Miss SBarbie!
